The following list contains extracts from co-raw materials. Co-raw materials / by-products are those raw materials which for various reasons are secondary raw materials of our suppliers and are recycled by Botanica. Botanica then allows the most raw materials to dry gently and processes them into extracts.

The following products can be used for cosmetic and technical purposes.

Botanica neither performs nor commissions tests on animals. Our raw materials are natural and can vary slightly from harvest to harvest without affecting the quality of the product. Further information can be found in the corresponding specification.

Please note that some products are not available all year round. Please ask us about the availability. This list is not exhaustive and represents only a part of our products. If you are looking for specific products for your formulation, we are looking forward to your contact.

According to the EU directive, co-raw materials / by-products also include agricultural residues like straw, husks, shells, marc etc.

We differentiate the co-raw materials / by-products into general co-raw materials, pomace as co-raw material and «ugly plants».

General co-raw materials:

Often only selected parts of plant are used for certain products, for example in the food industry, so that the other parts of plants are surplus and cannot be reused. Co-raw materials can also be produced by thinning certain plant parts on trees, so that the other fruits on the tree can thrive well and strongly. Wilted petals, which are no longer used as decoration, also find a new use as a by-product. Further examples of co-raw materials are renewable, less or not used parts of useful plants like apple flowers or leaves, etc.

Pomace as co-raw material:

When juice is produced, pomace is produced as a secondary product. The pomace is the residue from pressing or grinding and still contains valuable ingredients that are used sustainably.

Ugly plants:

«Ugly plants» include deformed or non-conforming vegetables, fruits etc. In vegetable- / fruit- production, there is usually a part that does not meet the optical quality standard and is thus avoided by the supply chain. Branched carrots, for example, belong to the «ugly plants».
